

AIR Krems

Amy Yoes /April 1-July 1, 2011

My residency at Air Krems was a wonderfully productive time. Taking advantage of the spacious studios and of their beautiful natural light, I was able to work on various projects while I was there. I produced a series of photographs which will be shown September 2011 at CB1 Gallery in Los Angeles, California. The studios are well appointed and maintained, and the collaboration of everyone at AIR and at Galerie Stadtpark was very much appreciated. Coming from a New York studio so full of past projects, the studio at the residency allowed me to enjoy a white, serene space. It was idyllic to be in sync with the changing light on the landscape of the Danube and green hills outside the studio windows.

I also worked on an installation piece that I'll be showing this December at Galerie Stadtpark in Krems. I was able to get to know the gallery space well during my stay, and am really looking forward to the project.

I'd like to thank David Komary and Sabine Gueldenfusz for their assistance, good cheer, and hospitality. Their efforts made for a fantastic experience.
